Accubid Acquires ConstructJob

Toronto, Canada, September, 2004

Accubid Systems is pleased to announce the acquisition of ConstructJob Inc. of Meade, Colorado. ConstructJob provides a full line of web-based document management and bid solicitation software, allowing contractors to communicate, collaborate, and manage project documentation more efficiently. Since ConstructJob products are web-based, there's no software to install, upgrade, and maintain, and information is accessible wherever there's an Internet connection. For more information on ConstructJob products, visit www.constructjob.com.

ConstructJob founder Natalie Abshier has joined Accubid as the manager of Accubid's new Project Management Products division, and will continue to direct the development of the ConstructJob product line. Existing ConstructJob users will continue to deal with Natalie and her team on matters of product support, training, and implementation.

Natalie is excited by the prospect of joining the industry leader in estimating software for specialty contractors. As Natalie explains it, "my vision of providing a project management system that allows contractors to manage projects easier and more efficiently has become a reality that will now grow to an even larger scale with Accubid."

Accubid President & CEO Giovanni Marcelli is equally excited, stating that "the acquisition of ConstructJob allows Accubid to truly become a total solution provider for all contractor needs from estimating through project management." An enhanced version of the flagship ConstructJob product, with document alerts and direct links to Microsoft Outlook, will be released under the Accubid brand name later this year.

Accubid Systems is the leading provider of estimating, billing, and change order software for mechanical, electrical, and structured cabling contractors.
