Accubid's Computerized Estimating Courses Receive the CCA's Gold Seal Certification

Toronto Canada July, 2003

Accubid's Computerized Estimating Level 100 courses have received the Gold Seal certification from the Canadian Construction Association. The CCA's Gold Seal certifies that the electrical, mechanical, and structured cabling versions of Accubid's entry level estimating course are of "exceptionally high caliber".

Accubid's Computerized Estimating Level 100 courses are designed to teach journeymen and novice estimators the principles and methodologies of modern-day estimating. Students are introduced to the principles of estimating and then coached through a complete takeoff of a commercial building using a computerized estimating program. The Level 100 course forms part of a 3-course certification program in Computerized Estimating offered by Accubid.

The CCA Gold Seal Certification Program is a national certification program for construction Project Managers, Superintendents and Estimators. The Gold Seal initiative is primarily designed to advance the demand and supply of construction management educational courses, and to improve the quality and mobility of managers. The Canadian Construction Association is the voice of the non-residential construction industry in Canada, an industry that employs over 880,000 Canadian men and women and produces $134 billion in goods and services.

Accubid Systems is the leading North American supplier of estimating, billing, and change order software for electrical, mechanical, and structured cabling contractors. Accubid also offers professional development courses and product training labs. Accubid has long served the contracting industry with software and education. Accubid courses are available both for industry novices and for professionals wishing to upgrade their skills.
