ConstructJob wins IEC Software Product of the Year

Toronto, Canada, November, 2006

ConstructJob, Accubid's web-based project management system for contractors, has been honored with the IEC's Innovative Product of the Year award for 2006 in the software category. Only one product in each category received this award which was determined by a vote of attendees at the recent IEC National Conference & Expo in Denver, CO.

ConstructJob allows contractors to create, manage, track, and share project documentation more efficiently, and communicate and collaborate with industry partners more effectively. Since ConstructJob is web-based, your project information is accessible from any location with an Internet connection.

The latest version of ConstructJob is now integrated with Accubid's Estimating Version 7 solutions, allowing project managers to use estimating data as the starting point for the project.

Accubid Systems is the leading provider of estimating, billing, and change order software for electrical and mechanical contractors. Accubid products are used by over 14,500 active users in over 4,300 companies across North America.
